Where Children's Creativity Comes Alive

Children turn their own paper drawings into characters, interactive worlds, and stories, directly in the browser.

For children aged 3–10

Creativity Often Stops at the Paper

Physical creativity

Children draw, color, and imagine. But when the page is finished, the experience usually ends.

Create → Finished → Stop

Digital entertainment

Engaging, but children often watch, swipe, and consume someone else's content.

Watch → Swipe → Watch

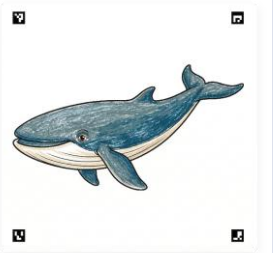

SCANVAS Create → Explore → Discover → Create Again

What if a child's own creation became the starting point of a digital world?

From Paper to Interactive Worlds

Children color a Scanvas sheet, scan or photograph it through the website, and watch their own artwork become an interactive character.

Alive in the world

One Engine, Many Interactive Worlds

1 Computer-Vision Scan

Four printed markers guide perspective correction, cropping, and object extraction.

2 Personalized Animation

The extracted artwork, not a stock character, enters the world.

3 Code-Linked Sheets

Each physical sheet links to its template and digital experience.

4 Reusable Content Engine

The same engine supports new animals, vehicles, nature, culture, characters, and stories.

New content does not require rebuilding the platform.

From Children's Creativity to Digital Culture

CREATE

Child-generated creativity

Children begin with their own imagination and physical artwork.

- Drawing
- Coloring
- Imagination

EXPERIENCE

Interactive digital worlds

Their creation becomes part of a living world.

- Animation
- Sound
- Stories
- Interaction
- Discovery

CONTENT & IP

Scalable worlds and characters

The same platform expands into new content.

- Nature
- Vehicles
- Local culture
- Characters
- Partners

Children do not only consume digital culture: they participate in creating it.

Start Local. Scale the Content Engine.
